PREFACE TO FOURTH VOLUME.

In the completion of this, the last volume of the series containing the available names of North Carolina soldiers in the late Confederate States Army, it is deemed proper that further explanations should be made. The work was undertaken with a full understanding of the many difficulties and disadvantages inherent to the lapse of time. It was well understood, both by the State authorities and the compiler, that only meagre sources remained from which to construct the statement desired. The work undertaken in 1862 by Maj. Foote and his assistants, was so far incomplete that barely half of the regiments and battalions sent out by North Carolina were included in the Roll of Honor. In the vast multitude of names and dates, it was plain that many mistakes must occur, both as to names and incidents, but it was hoped that educated men would understand and appreciate the difficulties in the way of a satisfactory registration of our troops. I am glad to say that with a great majority this has been the case. In a few cases surviving officers have complained that their full record does not appear. No one regrets more than the compiler of this work that such is the case, but there was no remedy for supplying the vast array of such deficiences. It was a matter of impossibility to write to every officer for the date of his commission, when not given in the returns, not only because there were too many, but also because, as a general rule, the men and their post offices were unknown. In the outset I began the work by sending every company roll to some survivor of the command, with the request that it might be returned after such corrections as were possible. Not many of these rolls were ever regained, and I know that too often they were left unnoticed and lost. I have made as full and correct a roster of our troops as I possibly could, under the circumstances, and the way is now open for a full and corrected edition to be made if the State authorities will continue the work. Every company, almost without exception, can be found more or less fully reported in this work. The volumes will reach every county in the State, and if each county will take the rolls as given and correct them, as was done by Major Harper in the instance of Company H of the 58th Regiment, we may secure a much fuller and more satisfactory showing.

With all the care that has been taken, typographical errors have now and then occurred in the twelve months of press work. On the 18th page of this volume, a brigade, composed of the 2d, 4th, 14th and 30th N. C. Regiments, is assigned to Brig.-Gen. J. R. Anderson. This should have been Brig.-Gen. Geo. B. Anderson, who was so unfortunately wounded unto death at Sharpsburg, Sept. 19th, 1862. So, too, in all the rosters of Confederate Generals, I failed to add the name of Major Gen. J. F. Gilmer. In the staff of President Davis his name occurs as Colonel of Engineers. In the statement of his promotion as Major-General, he is ascribed to his native State as still his residence. I had supposed that like Generals Bragg, Polk, McCulloch and others, he had removed his home to another State, but am glad that so capable and gallant an officer was still a full North Carolinian.

After the repeated inspection of the rolls of nearly every regiment, battalion and company sent out by North Carolina, I am thoroughly convinced that the announcement in the first volume that one hundred and fifty thousand men were contributed by North Carolina to the Confederate defense was excessive. I was misled by the old estimate of one hundred and twenty-three thousand said to be ascertained outside of the addition, not recorded in the Roll of Honor. More than one hundred and four thousand names are given in this Roster. This was far short of the truth. Many of the regiments herein given do not exhibit one-half of the men who really belonged to them. The 10th and 17th are fair specimens. In the case of the 10th Regiment, only companies A and D approximate their true strength. I knew the men of Company D of the 17th Regiment, and feel confident half of their names are not given. Take again the 27th Regiment. I am satisfied that it was quite as numerous as the two regiments occurring, one before, the other just after it—to wit, the 26th and 28th N. C. Regiments. Yet while they each fill 44 pages of printed matter, the 27th is confined to 21. I am satisfied that in this way that fully twenty thousand names are unrecorded of the men of North Carolina, who gave their service to the Confederate cause.

The saddest thought connected with this failure of the records to perpetuate their names, is the fact that a large per centage of these unaccredited heroes are asleep on the battle fields, and hard by the great hospitals that witnessed their deaths. The dead and those discharged for disabling wounds were, in a great measure, soon entirely dropped from the rolls by the Orderly Sergeants. Thus it is, that all my efforts to perpetuate their memories have proved abortive, but I trust that their surviving comrades may yet add to the names in this Roster, and justice to their memories may yet be done. As testimony of the estimation in which the North Carolina troops were held by those who had abundant means of judging, the two following letters will, perhaps, be of interest to this and future generations:

BEAUVOIR, HARRISON COUNTY, MISS., 9th May, 1882.

COL. W. L. SAUNDERS, Secrtary of State:

DEAR SIR—I am gratified to learn that you have in course of preparation a Roster of North Carolina Troops in the Confederate service. Men live in the estimation of posterity not by their deeds alone, but by their historian also.

North Carolina may proudly point to the valor of her sons in the Revolutionary war to sustain her declaration that she was a free, sovereign and independent State.

As one of the original thirteen that formed the Confederation, she clung to it with the fidelity and tenacity characteristic of her people, hence she was next to the last to accept the Constitution for a more perfect Union; but having entered in, she was faithful to it in every public and private relation, and when at last it became needful to consider the propriety of asserting the sovereignty she had never surrendered, the same deliberation which had marked her previous course then governed her action, hence she was not among the first to pass an ordinance for secession; yet, after having duly counted the cost, she boldly accepted the issue and staked life, fortune and sacred honor on the maintenance of the principles for which her sons had fought, bled and died in the war of 1776.

How her sons bore themselves in the last ordeal your Roster will partly tell. There will be shown the relative proportion of her troops to her population capable of bearing arms, and the long list of killed and wounded will prove that they were not the rear in attack or the front in retreat.

I have often expressed my high estimate of the conduct of North Carolinians during our war, but can eulogy enhance the fair fame with which their names will descend to posterity?

That their children and their children's children may be worthy of their sires is the best wish and highest hope which I can offer for them.

Yours, faithfully,

JEFFERSON DAVIS.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF NORTHERN VIRGINIA,
August 29th, 1864.

His Excellency Z. B. VANCE, Governor of N. C., Raleigh:

GOVERNOR: The recent success of the enemy at Mobile may induce him to attack Wilmington, and the importance of that place is such that every effort should be made to defend it. As you are aware, the strength of the enemy's armies in Virginia and Georgia will prevent the detachment of any part of our forces opposed to them, and our chief reliance for the protection of Wilmington, must be placed upon the reserves and local troops of the State. I think if an attack should be made, the enemy will be obliged to employ raw troops to a great extent, and I believe the local and reserve forces, with the present garrison, sufficient to hold the place, if they will come forward freely.

I respectfully ask the co-operation of your Excellency to induce them to do so, and the aid of influence and authority to provide for the most obstinate defence. I have frequently been called upon to mention the services of North Carolina soldiers in this army, but their gallantry and conduct was never more deserving of admiration than the engagement at Reams' Station on the 25th instant.

The brigades of Generals Cook, McRae and Lane, the last under the temporary command of General Conner, advanced through a thick abattis of felled trees under a heavy fire of musketry and artillery, and carried the enemy's works with a steady courage that elicited the warm commendation of their Corps and Division Commanders, and the admiration of the army.

On the same occasion, the Brigade of General Barringer bore a conspicuous part in the operations of the Cavalry which were not less distinguished for boldness and efficiency than those of the Infantry.

If the men who remain in North Carolina show the spirit of those they have sent to the field, as I doubt not they do, her defense may be securely entrusted to their hands.

I am, with great respect,

Your obedient servant,

R. E. LEE, General.

NOTE.—The names of some men in this company were also reported in Co. C. It may be that they were transferred, but I can find no note to that effect. The confusion of these late regiments as to returns makes it a matter of great labor to bring them to anything like a clear statement of their strength and casualties.
